MALT METER
Not Malty  Very Malty

HOP METER
Not Hoppy  Very Hoppy

LAGERS

Lagers have a crisper taste due to their fermentation process, mellowing the beer & creating a smoother taste.

 PILSNER ABV: 4.5-5.5% IBU: 25-45 Straw-colored, carbonated, & low in alcohol 	 BOCK ABV: 5.5-7.5% IBU: 15-35 Sweet & dark, with widely ranging flavors 	 DUNKEL ABV: 4.0-6.0% IBU: 10-18 Dark amber with smooth flavors similar to coffee 	 OCTOBERFEST ABV: 4.0-7.0% IBU: 20-28 Full-bodied and dark brown, Drank in October

ALES

Ales are sweet & full-bodied. Many ales contain hops which add a bitter flavor to counteract sweetness.

 PORTER ABV: 4.0-7.5% IBU: 18-50 Dark and heavy, with a burnt flavor 	 PALE ALE ABV: 4.0-7.0% IBU: 18-45 Malty and hoppy with fruity aromas 	 STOUT ABV: 4.0-7.0% IBU: 20-75 Roasted, not malted, sweet with caramel aromas 	 AMBER ABV: 4.0-7.0% IBU: 25-40 Sweet from excess malt, & amber-colored
 WHEAT ABV: 4.0-7.0% IBU: 8-15 Pale, highly carbonated, and commonly fruity 	 IRISH ALE ABV: 4.0-6.0% IBU: 18-28 Deep red in color with malty and sweet flavors 	 IPA ABV: 5.5-7.5% IBU: 40-120 Amber and extremely bitter

WHAT IS "MALTY"?

"Malty" flavor is provided by malted cereal grains, which are sugars that are fermented to create the CO₂ and alcohol content. Malt contributes to beer color, flavor, and mouthfeel. Malts make beer sweet but, depending on the grain used, can also make the beer darker and heavier. Malts also include richer flavors like caramel and espresso. Porters are known for their malty taste.

WHAT IS "HOPPY"?

"Hoppy" flavor is provided by hops. This flower is the bitterness that balances the malt's sweetness. The flavor depends on where the hops are grown, but most have fruity, herbal, or citrus flavors. Beers with strong hoppy flavors come from hops being left in the barrel longer. The IPA specifically began when hops were left in the barrel during shipment from India to England.
